do-it-yourself HAIRDO SCHOOL

In two sessions at his New York salon, hair stylist Victor Vito teaches women to be their own best hairdressers

In the first session Mr. Vito works out a becoming style and cuts hair after it has been shampooed. An instructor shows how to comb hair for setting, and properly combed hair is photographed from four angles for a practice guide later

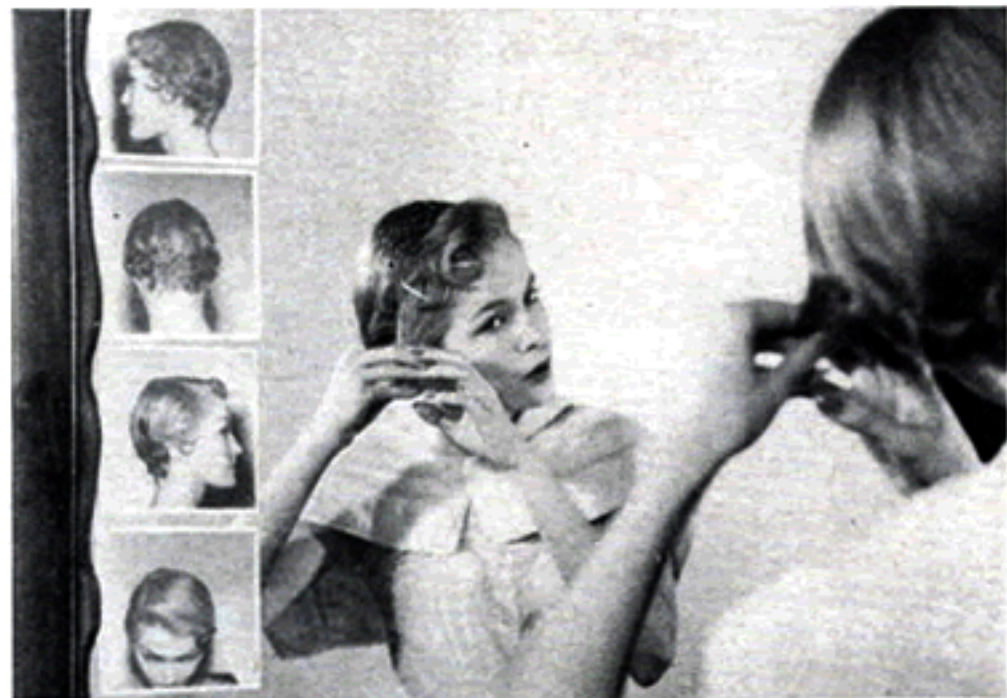

Next step is learning to make various pin curls used in set. Instructor demonstrates the technique, and more pictures are taken to show how hair should look in pin curls. Hair is unwound after drying, and student repins it

Sliding a pin curl off finger without musing it takes practice too

With one eye on the guide-photographs of her set, she practices pinning her hair up every night. To make a neat curl, she winds small section, slides a pin over it, being careful to keep ends inside circle of curl

Back to the salon two weeks later for a progress check. After a shampoo she sets her own hair under instructor's supervision. She may try several times before set is judged perfect. After drying, she does comb-out

Out for the evening — and she never looked prettier. The girl who was once "all thumbs" has learned to handle her own hair like a professional
